

THE RAGING RAPIDS

Arrange the letters in the columns below to spell out the way Roger Woodward described being churned around in the rapids of the Niagara River before plunging over the Falls. Each letter belongs in the same column, but not necessarily in the order it appears at the top. Some of the letters have already been placed in the grid. A darkened space indicates the end of a word.

Hint: Begin with the shorter words, so that you can cross out letters you have already used.
